

Jeremy Goldberg is a serial entrepreneur and community builder who has built a career leading transformational change.

Jeremy Goldberg is the President, Co-Founder, & Quarterback of LeagueApps, a leading youth sports technology company where he oversees strategy, business development, brand & communications, and NextUp platform, the professional home of the youth sports industry. LeagueApps powers thousands of youth and local sports organizations as well as programs by professional leagues and teams. The LeagueApps platform has helped these organizations manage millions of events, process billions of dollars that enable their sports programming, as well as support their engagement of millions of players, parents, and coaches.

He is the Co-Founder, Co-Chairman, and Executive Board member of two youth sports nonprofits: FundPlay Foundation, spun out of LeagueApps to build capacity of youth sports nonprofits in underserved communities; and Play Sports Coalition, the youth sports industry's collective advocacy arm. He is a leadership member of the Aspen Institute's Project Play initiative, and also serves as an Executive Board member of Search for Common Ground, the largest peacebuilding NGO in the world.

Jeremy was an operating partner at 212MEDIA, a venture development firm that produced LeagueApps, Saavn (exited to Reliance Jio), LiftMetrix (exited to Hootsuite), and Homer. Previously, he served in technology strategy roles at the Mitchell Madison Group and Generate Insights and was the Founder and CEO of poliVOICE..

Jeremy holds a bachelor's degree with Honors from Georgetown's School of Foreign Service, and a master's in international affairs from Columbia University's School of International & Public Affairs. He and his wife Jenna live with their two children in Pennsylvania where he applies his youth sports insights to coach flag football and basketball.
